Located on the Uruguay River in Argentina, this year-round tailwater has recorded some of the largest Golden Dorados ever recorded to date. The tailwater is known by the operators as "La Zona" meaning "The Zone" because it is believed there is no other place compared, in matters of quantity and quality of fish, to this great freshwater Dorado haven. The government just recently awarded exclusive rights to the facility to fish this trophy section of water in the exchange for continuous management and conservation studies on the fishery. In the past it was closed for many years and simply off limits to all fisherman. Marketed primarily as a fly fishing destination, the Uruguay River offers the opportunity to catch a world-class Golden Dorado of your dreams on the fly. Dinner and overnight at the lodge.

Day Three through Day Six

FISHING AT LA ZONA

Full fishing days with your guide. Fishing on the tailwater will consist of fishing via comfortable skiffs, specially designed by La Zona for fishing in the specific area. The skiffs have wide platforms that allow unobstructed casting from both the bow and stern for fly casters. In addition to fly fishing, spin or baitcast angling is permitted using one barbless treble hook in the lures. At La Zona, fisherman will also find large sardinatas, lachas and chafalotes, which are all excellent fighters. Dinner and overnight at lodge.
